When do we get an update on API.

I've been waiting for the last 3 - 4 months, now.

Nah, we haven't possibly been waiting for this long...

"check the date" Already October ?
"check when the API has been removed" May !?

More people should cancel their MAL supporter role to get DeNA to wake up.

(why people pay for a free service is beyond me, they already get ur ad revenue.)

More of a thing to give extra support and get something small back. Ad revenue isn't enough they say. Can't say I disagree with your first sentence though. If I paid for my supporter I would've cancelled it the minute I could after the fiasco

I've recently been looking at the features on MAL and trying to implement an API based on that - threads, users, articles, anime, manga, characters, people, forums, subforums e.t.c

Just for fun and experimenting to see how hard it would be to work on the API.

Talk is cheap, show me the code.

Almost is not good enough.

I was just browsing the forums and got impressed by your dedication.

I'm just peddling with a simple pet project like I am always doing just this time round I decided to implement the database based on what I think MAL has

I think your only hope would be convincing MAL folks to have their old API back online.

If miraculously, someone started working on the API today, they would probably not release it until maybe Feb, March, April next year.

Wait, wait, wait... So what about old shows or unlicensed shows? Why remove the fansub group listing for those? Why even bother listing those shows at all if they aren't available legally? It's just a whole host of nonsense double standards.

well,

I really don't see why fansubs are -such- a huge part of this thread while they barely affect/interfere with the welfare of MAL users.

Fansubs are the reason MAL even exists. Educate yourself, ignorant newbie.

Fansubs section removal is a big loss. I can't stand liberal/localization subs which don't even qualify to be called a translation. Used that feature to quickly get feedback about quality of subs, will have to look for some other site now I guess.

That's not exactly the point. The main idea is just to make a point to support the anime industry not to make a silly resolution to stay away from bootleg and torrent sites.

Also, for those who care, my English is not exactly broken, it's more or less a way of being cool.

You completely missed the sarcasm of that post. People are not going to legally watch anime just because MAL removes a fansub section.

Can you guys please, fix the goddamn APIs so I can start using MAL again. It's been half a year already and what? The most important thing that keeps me using MAL still isn't fixed.

Never even realized that a Fansubs section exists so I have 0 problems with this.

To me the only thing the site's doing so far is potentially improving which I'm happy about.

It's quite probable that fansubs did not exist and the said MAL API didn't exist, either.

Talk is cheap, show me the code.

Almost is not good enough.

Your thread is totally about fansubs.

I don't think so or at least this is the most relevant I could make it.

Never even realized that a Fansubs section exists so I have 0 problems with this.
To me the only thing the site's doing so far is potentially improving which I'm happy about.

Removing a helpful site section improves jack shit.

Dunno, removing something I never used and improving upon things related to what I use seems like an improvement to me.

Many people used it and it isn't an improvement to ever remove a feature
