Nothing yet? It's been at least two whole seasons! You're going to make me jump ship, and I don't really have the dev time for it.

Just export your list to AniList and use Taiga. Stop torturing yourself when there's already great options out there. The fact that there's been no updates should tell you what MAL thinks about the API.

Y'all are some impatient bastards, good lord. Just wait for the API to be finished, please. No reason to dismiss the entire website because some parts of it are imperfect.

I don't mind the API thing but at least bring back your official android app to the store.

Welp, at least the last version of the official app still works somehow. That said, it's not listed on Google Play and it definitely needs improvement (a dark mode, more info, etc.) in that regard, PocketMAL was way better, but unfortunately, without an API, it does not work anymore TT.TT

I like that we were promised bimonthly updates only to not hear about progress at all in December.

Where are you finding this? Which apk version?
Also does it support Manga or only Anime?

If previously had it, it's still in your Play Store Library and you can install from here. It was stated here that new users won't be able to get it, temporarily <https://twitter.com/myanimelist/status/1007284294807678976?s=20>

I don't remember which site I got it from, but it is the latest version (0.11.13). I just googled and downloaded it when I found it. It only supports anime, which is a shame. Just keep in mind that if you don't install the latest version, it won't let you update your list.

"Updates every two weeks? We meant updates every two months!"
I promise not to be too disappointed even if the update turns out to be absolutely zero progress since the last update as long as the radio silence ends.

Guess this is goodbye MAL,
I had some good use of you. BUT it's a new year, new opportunities, and as someone mentioned there is a working anilist app. I guess I will move on, cause you have disappointed me so much that I won't return, unless PocketMal ever comes back, which is highly unlikely at this point, cause even that developer is probably done with this.
Sayonara, you seriously f'd up.

A lot of people have moved to Anilist now. So sad for MAL.

sadly i'm also gonna go to anilist, this is ridiculous. All i want is an app that downloads my episodes by itself and updates it on the website. GoodBye.

Already implied API is deprecated. AL and Kitsu are trash websites anyways.
What else will MAL fuck up with next?

Interesting, this is the first time I'm hearing someone criticize those sites. I don't hear much feedback about them at all (thank you).

A good thing to hear tho in a way because if we can get API back, community leaders and programmers can fix MAL up something nice and possibly bring many of the users who left back. From a community standpoint I believe we're in the negative right now since SO MANY people many of us knew left after the shutdown; that hit us hard. We need the API to help recover from that.

Between the two, I'd probably pick AL. Kitsu's website has horrible navigation and layout, simplicity backfires.

Exactly what I did. AniList works with Taiga and has an Android app.

Yeah, I think I'm out now. All I wanted was for Taiga to work again, but apparently fixing the API takes more than half a year. See you never.

Just a couple more days huh? Looks like we're really gonna hit two months without updates, boyos xD hang in there tho. Something will come up eventually :D

Even hearing "slow to no progress" would be fine.

Anything else in particular you don't like about those sites which you can share, please? I like to know since I'm involved in such things and want to improve communities and website experiences.

As someone who cares only about anime list I would prefer Kitsu because of larger database compared to AniList

I'd probably consider forgiving DeNA's radio silence a little bit if they would just come right out and publicly say, "We actually don't give a shit about MAL, so fuck all of you, you're not getting your API." I appreciate a company that tells the honest truth than one that strings its customers down a dark path without telling them anything about what's ahead.

Here's to hoping Media Do doesn't worship Crunchyroll and will bring back the fansub section.

Kaguya this season just made the case that fansubs are still relevant for TV anime releases in 2019.

too long time for an api... after ~1y of maintenance... and the result....
absolutely nothing....

how long does it take for enable the API ?
how many time we need to wait for API ?
how many people work in this API ? only one ????? seriously....

I think soon move to another anime list service, I waiting since too long time an update...
too long time for a stupid API update...
it becomes very boring and annoying

EDIT:
and I can say: how many people in ALL MAL knows how to program an API with PHP or NodeJS ? I think a lot....

To be fair, 70% of anime that's actually worth watching is fansub-only.

Such a big chunk of people I know left MAL for the other sites over this fucking API debacle, and more every month .-.
